Forming the physicians of tomorrow

For decades, Methodist Health System has trained the next generation of medical professionals, and the proceeds from this year's Robert S. Folsom Leadership Award went toward that very endeavor. Currently, Methodist has four residency programs and four fellowship programs, all of which are thriving and growing.

Bobby B. Lyle was honored as the recipient of this year's Folsom Award for his commitment to education and other philanthropic endeavors in North Texas and beyond. An event in his honor on Nov. 19 raised more than $1.5 million toward graduate medical education.

Advancing health care in North Texas

A new building, advancements in technology, and compassionate patient care took center stage for Methodist Dallas Medical Center in 2014:

- In July, Methodist Dallas opened the Charles A. Sammons Tower, dedicated to trauma, emergency, neurosciences, and critical care services, and announced that the American College of Surgeons and the state of Texas had designated the hospital as a Level I Trauma Center — the highest level available.
- We became the first hospital in the country to receive The Joint Commission's disease-specific care certification for pancreatic surgery and the first in Texas for pancreatic oncology.
- We expanded our list of minimally invasive procedures performed with the da Vinci® Surgical System, becoming the first hospital in the region to perform a Single-Site™ total hysterectomy and to perform a fully robotic Whipple procedure for patients with pancreatic cancer.
- We launched QuickER.org, an online tool that allows patients to select their emergency department (ED) treatment times and wait in the comfort of their homes before going to the hospital.
- Methodist Dallas became the second hospital in Dallas County to offer the Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner Program. Our ED has specially certified nurses on staff 24/7 to respond to victims of sexual assault.

Methodist and Mayo Clinic team up

The distinctive Perot Museum of Nature and Science served as the backdrop for a monumental announcement in September from Methodist Health System to its medical staff: Methodist became the first Texas member of the Mayo Clinic Care Network.

The collaboration allows the expertise of Mayo Clinic specialists to complement and support the care provided by physicians on our medical staff. Now patients who might seek care from a leading research organization, like Mayo Clinic, can access that same expertise right here close to home.

Methodist strives to be a trusted provider of quality health care in North Texas. Similarly, Mayo Clinic's approach to health care is rooted in the idea that the best patient care is achieved when experts from a variety of medical specialties can work together, focused on the patient. The organizations' shared vision keeps the patient at the center of everything we do — and the result is clinical excellence.
